

A Changed Life

Johnny wanted no part of God. Still, the young man came to the church in a rented movie theater.

“He said he liked coming because we didn’t make him dress up,” remembers Larry Totzke, the pastor of Capital City Grace Church, a Grace Brethren congregation in Columbus, Ohio. “He could wear what he wanted and we were friendly.”

Nearly five months later, Johnny announced, “about a week or so ago I decided that God wasn’t my enemy, and I decided to turn my life over and become a follower of Jesus.”

A few months later Johnny was reading his Bible on the bus. The lady beside him asked what he was reading. As a result, she decided to follow Jesus, too.

“Before that ride was over, five people decided to do the same thing — just because Johnny was riding a bus, reading his Bible, and was willing to talk to people about what he believed.”

Totzke claims none of the credit. “All we did was welcome Johnny into our church, shared with him the love of Jesus, and the Holy Spirit did the work in his heart that caused Johnny to be able to ride on the bus and do what he did,” he concludes.
